

Art in the Public Space

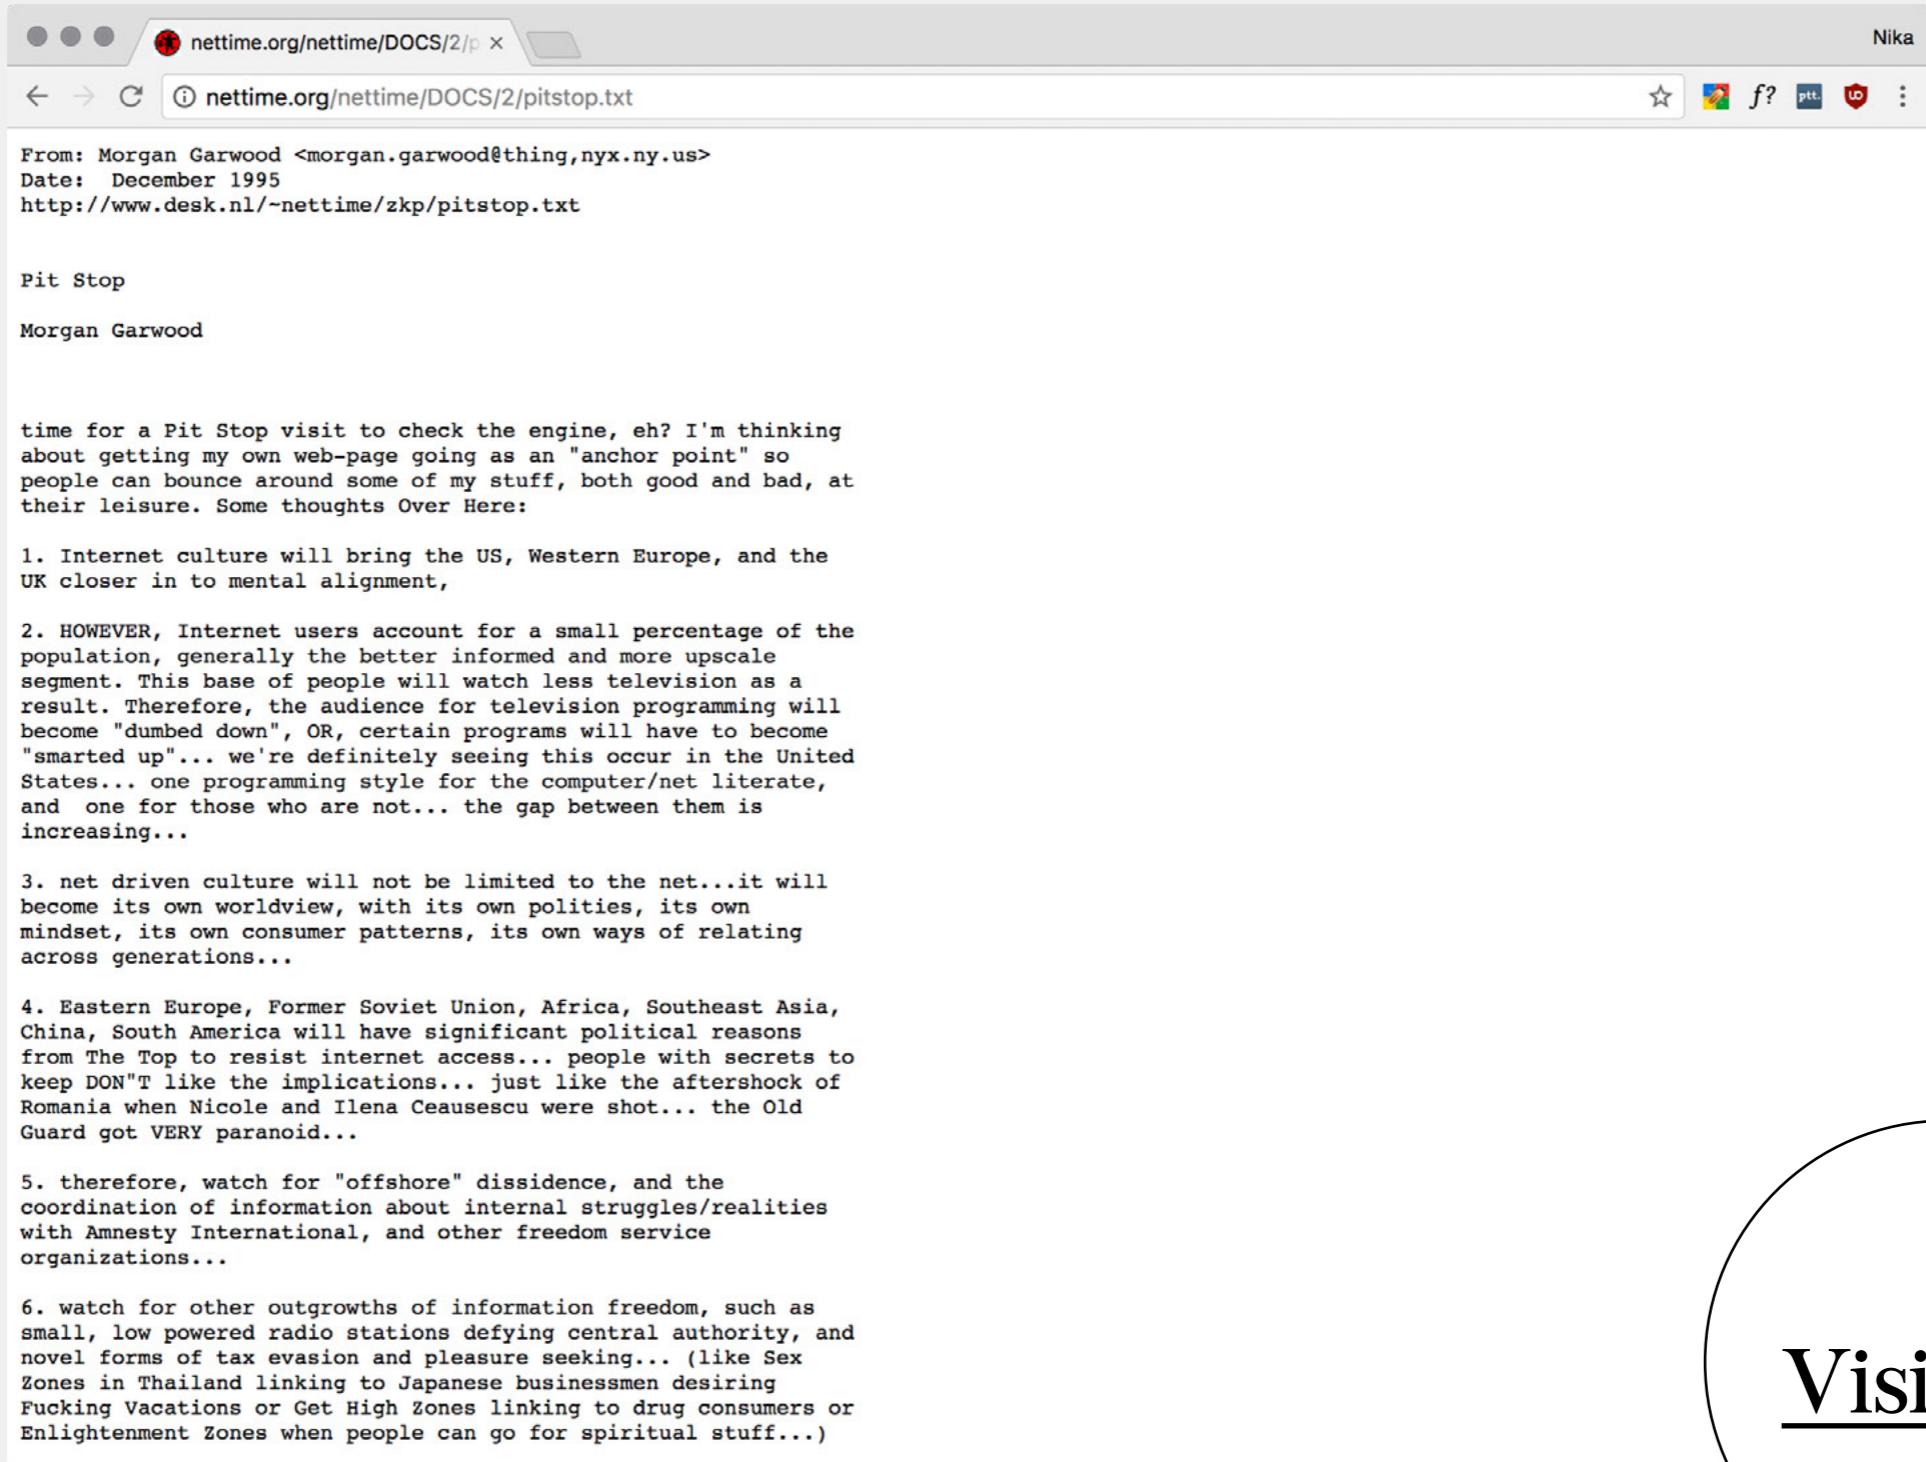

The term “net.art” is the result of a software glitch that occurred in December 1995 when artist Vuk Cosic opened an anonymous email only to find it had been mangled in transmission. Cosic could make out just one legible term — net.art — which he began to use to talk about online art.

Pit Stop

time for a Pit Stop visit to check the engine, eh? I'm thinking about getting my own web-page going as an "anchor point" so people can bounce around some of my stuff, both good and bad, at their leisure. Some thoughts Over Here:

1. Internet culture will bring the US, Western Europe, and the UK closer in to mental alignment,
2. HOWEVER, Internet users account for a small percentage of the population, generally the better informed and more upscale segment. This base of people will watch less television as a result. Therefore, the audience for television programming will become "dumbed down", OR, certain programs will have to become "smarted up"... we're definitely seeing this occur in the United States... one programming style for the computer/net literate, and one for those who are not... the gap between them is increasing...
3. net driven culture will not be limited to the net...it will become its own worldview, with its own polities, its own mindset, its own consumer patterns, its own ways of relating across generations...
4. Eastern Europe, Former Soviet Union, Africa, Southeast Asia, China, South America will have significant political reasons from The Top to resist internet access... people with secrets to keep DON'T like the implications... just like the aftershock of Romania when Nicole and Ilena Ceausescu were shot... the Old Guard got VERY paranoid...
5. therefore, watch for "offshore" dissidence, and the coordination of information about internal struggles/realities with Amnesty International, and other freedom service organizations...
6. watch for other outgrowths of information freedom, such as small, low powered radio stations defying central authority, and novel forms of tax evasion and pleasure seeking... (like Sex Zones in Thailand linking to Japanese businessmen desiring Fucking Vacations or Get High Zones linking to drug consumers or Enlightenment Zones when people can go for spiritual stuff...)

The screenshot shows a web browser window titled "Lunar Tunes". The address bar indicates a secure connection to <https://www.warnerbros.com/archive/spacejam/movie/cmp/tunes/tunesframes.html>. The main content is a promotional graphic for "LUNAR TUNES". The graphic features a starry background and a central image of a basketball court with a city skyline silhouette. Labels include "LUNAR TUNES" at the top, "Space Jam Arena" on the right, "((Air Waves))" on the left, and "Movie Soundtrack" at the bottom. A small "Space Jam" logo is in the top left corner of the browser window.

When you've got the world's greatest basketball superstars and the world's greatest cartoon characters facing off against space aliens, you can't skimp on the jams -- and sure enough, Warner Sunset/Atlantic Records' Space Jam: Music From The Motion Picture is one of the most powerful collections in the universe.

Wayback Machine Demo

The screenshot shows the Internet Archive Wayback Machine homepage. At the top, there's a navigation bar with icons for file operations (New, Open, Save, Print, Copy, Paste) and a search bar. The main header features the "INTERNET ARCHIVE" logo and the "WayBack Machine" logo with a red "WayBack" and black "Machine". Below the header is a search bar with the placeholder "http://". To the right of the search bar are "BROWSE HISTORY" and "DONATE" buttons. A banner below the search bar encourages users to "Please try our Beta Wayback Machine - Now with Site Search!". The main content area features a grid of thumbnail images showing various archived web pages from different years. Below this grid are three sections: "Tools" (with links to Wayback Machine Availability API, WordPress Broken Link Checker, and 404 Handler for Webmasters), "Subscription Service" (describing Archive-It and its benefits), and "Save Page Now" (a form for capturing a live web page). At the bottom, there are links for "FAQ", "Contact Us", and "Terms of Service (Dec 31, 2014)".
